

A TICKET BETWEEN US

Another day walking in this zone.
Working here, I wonder if what I do is wrong.
Sometimes I forget where I came from, but I know I want to get back to you.
And now I'm writing this song.

If they told me it would be hard to believe.
That on a Sunday you would be here.
A look in your blue eyes. It was enough to tell me that everything would be fine.

That night in the bonfire, my heart burned warming my feelings.
Every second at her side made it all right.
There were so many stars that night, and there was one of them were on my side.

CHORUS:

(Every night I wanted to be by your side.
Her eyes wishing everything was alright. I'm no longer lost, or going in circles.
Every step I take, I get closer to you.
Under this blue sky, I realize you are in the middle of my desires.
Imagining that this moment will not be mine, it will be ours.)

Days passed and we met again that night.
After dancing under those blue lights.
You told me your wishes and desires, smiling and looking at the TV.
You said you knew your future was in me.

In the middle of the day, you took me to a place where we could stay.
The lake where we swam made of happy tears.
Warmed by my heartbeat.
Birds flying and you whispering in my ear.
I wished I had that feeling forever.

The sun was gone, the moon had come.
The way you hold me is your gun.
There I wished we had another moment like this soon.
In which I could only be happy

CHORUS

Time was running out.
You knew I needed to go back.
Astronauts cannot stay on the moon forever.
And I couldn't stay there forever.

At the airport you stopped me.
A letter gave me, and her lips on mine.
In a few moments I would disappear, that's not what I wanted for me.

CHORUS

Listening to the sounds of tomorrow as I clean my soul under water.
Lost in past and future memories and anguish.
At this moment my tears mix with the water, have I lost my face?
I don't know where my pain ends and my grace begins.
